

Meet Kurt.

STUDENT, ATHLETE
AND CANCER SURVIVOR

W

When Kurt noticed a lump in his neck, his family thought it might be the result of a sports injury. Soon after, physicians discovered that the lump was non-Hodgkin's lymphoma.

Kurt's family brought him to University of Minnesota Amplatz Children's Hospital, which is nationally and internationally recognized for cancer research and treatment, and ranked by U.S. News & World Report as one of the top 20 children's hospitals for caring for kids with cancer.

Using the newest therapies available, doctors were able to treat Kurt's cancer, allowing him to return to school and wrestling — and to add cancer survivor to his list of accomplishments.

To learn more about Kurt and other patients' stories, visit uofmchildrenshospital.org/Kurt.

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
Amplatz Children's Hospital